

Optional English for BA FL Students
Semester – IV

Course Title: Reading and Writing

Course Description

This course is an attempt to introduce young learners to the nuances, challenges, and delights of academic reading and writing. They will be introduced to the demands of the academy, will be taught to read and write according to its expectations. The Course will cover issues pertaining to punctuation and its uses, different kinds of reading strategies, and how to deploy them. Writing will be taught from the basics, and the techniques of producing good written material will be discussed. The course will use various genres in teaching the two skills—reading and writing. These can be any materials from newspaper reports to literature. There will be a significant amount of practical work with learners practicing close reading, and getting extensive practice in writing.

Evaluation Scheme

There will be internal examinations (40%) and an end-of semester examination (60%) taken in person.
